MRS. GRACE TELLS HER STORY OF THE SHOOTING

Finally just before the shooting Grace's business became involved and he clamored for money, said the witness. At last he persuaded Mrs. Grace to give him power of attorney to sell her house in Philadel-phia and also to sell some securities she owned.

Grace arranged to leave for Philadelphia on March 5, the day he was shot, and he insisted Mrs. Grace should go to his mother's home in Newnan. Grace's insistence that she go to Newnan made Mrs. Grace suspicious. She said:

"At first I did not suspect why he was so anxious for me to go to Newhan on that particular day, but finally I began to suspect that he was either planning to take a woman to Philadelphia with him or that perhaps he intended to get me out of town and have her come to our home and carry on his disgraceful conduct. and I believed it was either the woman who called him out of the theatre or the one whose picture he was carrying in his watch when I first met him and whom he had confessed that he had ruined and had taken from Atlanta to Philadelphia and lived with her and at one time was

At 8:15 P. M. the Justices announce

hat, while they had determined to grant the writ of error, they would not sign a writ of supersedeas or similar order which would interfere with the ballots to be used on Tuesday's election. They said the importance of the question was such that it should be determined by the entire Supreme Court.

Telegrams were hurried off to Kansas as soon as the decision was announced, because word was received from Gov. Stubbs yesterday that unless the printing of the ballots started by 7 o'clock last night they could not be delivered in all the districts of the State in time for use on Tuesday. The type for the ballots had been set up. and as the decision of the court did not interfere with the arrangement of the names, the lawyers in the case said that the 300,060 ballots needed for the State
